Research: Intergenerational relationships and pedagogical perspectives. Giving voice to grandmother, grandfathers and grandchildren

Abstract:

This three-year doctoral research proposes the qualitative study of the relationship between grandparents and grandchildren, to analyze the educational perspectives that this relationship can offer, both for children and for the elderly. The empirical study, carried out in two parallel phases, involves a non-representative sample of children and elderly people (65 children and 20 grandparents), selected on the basis of the voluntary participation in three different areas of the Tuscany. From the methodological point of view, the study assumes the ecological paradigm of educational research and the naturalistic epistemological perspective as a reference. The method adopted is the narrative inquiry, to allow people to reflect and give meaning to the personal experience through self-training narrative practice.
